

Keep Newfoundland and Labrador frack-free

There is NO up-side to fracking.

From an environmental perspective, it's reckless. It adds one more threat to our fresh water supplies at a time when fresh water supplies are low around the world. This is a serious problem and a global issue. A quick buck now does not even come close to justifying putting future supplies at risk. Additionally, the process uses extremely toxic chemicals detrimental to everything they come in contact with and I believe repeated underground explosions will destabilize the land.

From an employment perspective, there are many other more creative ways to create long-term meaningful employment rather than mindlessly chewing up all our resources, as though they're limitless.

Collectively, we all need to say 'No!' to the few, for the good of the many

Sincerely,

B. Hodson
