

Keep Newfoundland and Labrador frack-free

I am most disheartened to hear that fracking in Newfoundland and Labrador is being proposed and promoted at this time. Every aspect of the fracking process is problematic.

The amount of water needed for the process is vast and extreme. Granting any organization permission to frack is clearly inexcusable. Even if you held the frackers accountable for their waste of clean water, they would be unable to replenish the tainted water.

Transporting the shale oil is problematic and risky.

Big bucks should be invested in developing green energy alternatives.

I would love to return to Newfoundland as a happy tourist knowing that Newfoundland has said no to all fracking.

Sincerely,

J. Fair
