

Keep Newfoundland and Labrador frack-free

I can't believe fracking is allowed anywhere! There are so many side effects of the process (excess water usage, chemical residue -- where does that end up?, questionable air emissions, lack of monitoring and long term effects) that it's unbridled use cannot be in the best interests of anyone but the fracking companies who make money from the process. Aren't the majority of the residents who end up dealing with the mess after the companies have moved on more important than the profit margin??? What about the dangers of transporting this volatile liquid?

I would love to travel to Newfoundland as I think of it as pristine beauty, not fractured, tortured and damaged and dangerous.

Sincerely,

N. Helm
