Fracking awareness group satisfied with review panel report

Marion Sampson said the Port au Port/Bay St. George Fracking Awareness Group is feeling vindicated by the report of the Newfoundland and Labrador Hydraulic Fracturing Review Panel released last week.

Although the Review Panel did not recommend the implementation of a legislated ban on hydraulic fracturing, the continuation of the “pause” in accepting applications involving hydraulic fracturing in Western Newfoundland is significant, Sampson wrote in a prepared release.

“The cautionary tone of the review panel’s conclusions substantiates the major concerns identified by our group and the general public,” Sampson, chair of the group, wrote.

She said the 85 recommendations address a long list of issues and the 17 red-stage recommendations that must be implemented before the “pause” can be lifted are critical.

“It is our understanding these recommendations will take years to implement. So, the ‘pause’ will be with us for the long term.”

While the group’s goal is to have a legislated ban on hydraulic fracturing, Sampson said members are confident this will happen at some point. She said as the recommendations are implemented they (members) believe more information will become available to the province’s citizens that will support the need for a legislated ban.

Sampson said members will wait for the provincial government to study the recommendations, then determine their next course of action.

She said it was good to hear Minister of Natural resources Siabhon Coady reiterate the need for social license in order for hydraulic fracturing to occur in the province.

“We (fracking awareness group) are certain such social license will never exist,” Sampson wrote. “However, our vigilance is undiminished. We are not going away.”
